Exceptional Contribution Award 2022

This Award will recognize the best application for any innovative development, product, service, launch, or project which will be pioneering, inventive, and of substantial value to scholarly communication. The applications can embody any part of the scholarly and professional publishing business and must validate distinction concerning novelty, magnitude, and merit to its community, applicability, and long-term viability. The applications must elaborate on distinct benefits and advances they represent in their sector.

The judges can make more than one award based on the submissions received. For a coherent judgment, each application must include detail on the background, business model, resources, development, operation of the product or service, and how you are calculating success.

Email your applications to Jean Ashley at jean@theacse.com.

Monday, 01 August 2022 shall be the closing date of application, while the shortlisted applicants should be confirmed in August. The winners will be announced at the ACSE Annual Meeting (Virtual).

ACSE may publish a list of submissions together with the statements of contribution and innovation. All other information within the applications will be treated as strictly confidential.
